

Dino Day in the Valley

A Cozy Adventure for Little Explorers

This book belongs to

In a valley soft and
green, Little dinos
could be seen. They stretched their tails
and blinked awake,
Ready for adventures
they would make.

Together they
roamed, side by side, Finding wonders far and wide. Every leaf
and every stone
Held secrets
waiting to be known.

Green Dino climbed a rocky hill, Feeling brave and very still.

The breeze was warm, the sky was wide — A perfect place to look outside.

Orange Dino
stomped with
cheer,
“Let’s explore
the world from
here!”

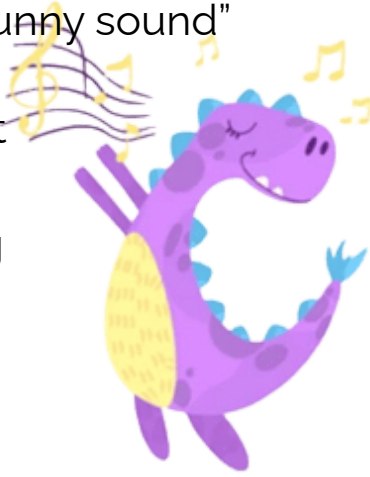

His happy feet made thumping sounds
That echoed through the grassy grounds.

Purple Dino twirled around, Laughing at each funny sound"

She spun so fast
the flowers
swayed, Turning
playtime into a
parade.

Blue Dino splashed in puddles bright,
Making rainbows in the light.

Drops flew high and sparkled down, Painting colors all around.

They wandered to a shady glen Where sunlight peeked through now and then. A fluttering leaf drifted near,
And Purple Dino whispered, "Look — come here!"

A tiny beetle,
shiny blue,
Crawled along
a stem of dew.

The dinos
watched it
toddle by, A little jewel
beneath the sky.

Next they found a bubbling stream
That shimmered like a silver dream.
Orange Dino dipped his toes, Giggling as the water rose.

Green Dino
spotted something
new — A footprint
shaped like
morning dew.
“Who made this
track?” he asked
with awe. “Let’s
follow it and see
what we saw!”

They followed
prints through
moss and shade
Until the path
began to fade. But just ahead, beneath
a tree, A baby dino chirped with glee.

They led her home through fields of gold, Sharing stories brave and bold. The sun dipped low, the sky turned pink, A perfect time to stop and think.

When the sun
began to set,

They
whispered, "Best
adventure yet."

With hearts so full and steps so light, They headed home to say goodnight.
